Toano, James City Co., Va.

Owner: Not known

Date: 18th Century

Builder: Not known

Condition: Poor

Description: The house itself is frame, a story and a half high with twin chimneys at either end. The house being two rooms deep has a broad low gable. It has been considerably altered. In the rear is an interesting smoke house of unusual construction. The lower part of it is of dressed logs about 10" thick and about 14" wide. These are rectangular in section and halved over each other at the corners. Above the log section is a studded and weather boarded superstructure. The entrance door is sheathed with cleats laid over it to form a panel design. The building is now ruinous.
